National Ecological Center of Ukraine together with partners invite young people and all interested parties to participate in a series of project events: "Education for sustainable development: transferring V4 countries' experience for Ukraine's recovery."

Registered project participants will be able to take part in online seminars by European and Ukrainian experts in the field of sustainable development. The most active participants will have the opportunity to receive financial support to participate in the Winter Session of the Carpathian School, which will traditionally take place in the heart of the Hutsul region - the charming city of Kosiv, as well as in the competition for the restoration and development of the Carpathians, in which the best works will receive a financial award.

The topics of online seminars include:

- Sustainable development of the Carpathian region
- Climate change mitigation and adaptation.
- Cultural heritage: open-air museums in the Carpathian region.
- Phytoremediation of polluted soils
- Water scarcity and water supply in conditions of water shortage.
- Communication on climate change and environmental issues.

Target audience of the project: students, pupil, civil activists, teachers, local government officials, and other people who are interested in the sustainable development of the Carpathians and the restoration of Ukraine. We are waiting for you at our events!
